Lombardi's Way

The Green Bay area accorded Vince Lombardi a sort of athletic sainthood after his spectacular success there in the difficult business of professional football, but he is looking to greener

The Packers are not privately owned so Vince couldn't get a piece of the action. He is asking to be released from his Packer contract, which has several years to run, so that he can become a part owner and the manager-coach of the Washington Redskins.

The Packers can be thankful that he made them as great as they are and they have no real choice but to let him go. He wants to make use of his great talents while they're at prime worth, so he chucks a salary that most of us would welcome and reaches out for a part ownership of a major league club which he plans to make more profitable by his management.

We are interested in the regard for Lombardi's success even more than we are in his success, because, great as he is, he's only one man, and the persons he influences are legion. It may be the public impression that Lombardi is a good influence; that mothers point to him on the Clark Oil TV commercial and say to their sons: "If you eat your Wheaties and learn to coach you can be like that too!"

But Edward J. Gunderson, chairman of the psychology department at Milwaukee Technical College, says that Lombardi is a menace to public mental health. Actually, he doesn't put it that strongly, but that's what he means.

After the usual apologies for criticism of a man who is the most successful pro football coach in history, Gunderson says that some of Lombardi's prescriptions for living are bad mertal hygiene. They may be necessary for success in a sports business as whacky as professional football (in which the Packers' Jerry Kramer can get rich with "Instant Replay" about Lombardi's mental tyranny over his squad) but it heart doesn't make for public sanity.

"It may be," suggests Gunderson of Lombardiism "that it is necessary for success in pro football. If this is true, it is in some respects a neurotic game. Come to think of it, most successful players do have strong sadistic-massochistic trends. To enjoy this tough, brutal game they must be this way. I heard Kramer telling on TV how he works up hate all week against the man he will oppose on Sunday. This is not mentally healthy."

Lombardi says to win you must form the habit of doing things right all the time. (His habit slipped a little in the past season.) "There is no room for second place," he says. "There any age and at any time of day. is only one place in my game and that is first place . . . If you are lucky enough to find a guy with a lot of head and a lot of heart, he's never going to come off the field second. Running a football team is no different from running any kind of organization . . . The principles are the same. The object is to win — to beat the other

"I believe in God and in human decency, but I firmly believe that any man's finest hour is when he has worked his heart out in a good cause and lies exhausted on the field of battle - victorious."

Gunderson suggests that this being "first" has to be a snare and a delusion to most people; that the United States, like every other country, is a nation made up of second raters and worse. The overwhelming number do not come in first, nor even second or third in any category that most people consider important. Only one can be first in any activity. All the rest are losers.

This is not bad, says Psychologist Gunderson, unless we think so. Even very gifted people will not always come in first. Lombardi's guy with lots of head and lots of heart will come off the field second if he happens to meet up with a guy with equal head and heart who can run faster and hit harder.

"Most persons, of course, are no very gifted, but they can easily pick up this dangerous viewpoint," says Gunderson. "In my own school I have seen many students who believe that anyone can succeed in a particular profession if he works hard enough. This belief often seems greatest when aptitude is least.

"Many people, however, never give up and waste their lives in fruitless endeavors. Then they feel guilty because, with their philosophy, they must believe that they failed because they didn't work hard enough. Even those who achieve 'first' are in a precarious position because any day someone may come along and knock them into second place.'

Being successful, suggests Gunderson in an excellent article in the Milwaukee Journal of Jan. 26, is largely a matter of definition. If we attain goals that represent success to us, then we are successful. The more self-esteem we have (the more we accept and appreciate ourselves) the more mentally healthy and happy we'll be. "It's a tremendous discovery to realize that we can control how we feel, and that we are not at the mercy of what happens to us in terms of success, money, fame and other things."

Lombardi isn't carrying this view to Wash-

WHAT IS YOUR RISK RATING?

STUDIES SHOW that some so-called "risk factors" contributing to heart attacks can be controlled by the individual or his physician. Three of these are blood cholesterol measurement, blood pressure and smoking. If an individual is abnormal (cholesterol of 250 or more, blood pressure of 160 or more and more than one pack of cigarettes per day) on several counts, the risk is greatly multiplied. Figures above bars indicate chances of a heart attack resulting from a given risk factor measured against the average rate set at an index of 100. Chances of an attack for a person with three abnormalties are more than six times greater than the average and 10 times greater than for a person with none.

BOSTON (NEA) - My devotion to walking and bicycling has not been an accidental association. Rather, it signifies my deep feeling of the importance of the use of the leg muscles as an integral part of the maintenance of a proper circulation, as well as a deterrent to cardiovascular disease

Studies have shown, and this may come as something of a surprise, that when a person is walking about 30 per cent of the circulation of the blood is carried on by the leg muscles and the remaining portion by the

In using the leg muscles, the blood is being pushed upward against the law of gravitythrough the body and into the heart, with the great help of the valves with which nature endowed our veins

Vigorous leg muscle exercise is probably one of the best methods known to keep the veins clear and to prevent the formation of blood clots.

I hold no brief for any particular form of physical exercise, just so long as use of the leg muscles figures in it. Walking is available for everyone at

* * * Also, walking is the simplest lease expensive form of exercise. I suggest a pace of three to four miles an hour, and a minimum of an hour a day, or seven hours a week if it can't be done on a daily basis, for the maintenance of good circulation. Twice this length of time and distance would be better but it's not always possible. An hour a day is a "must."

Tennis, golf without a cart, swimming, skiing, gardening, mountain climbing and dancing (but not during or right after dinner) are other commendable forms of exercise involving the People should climb a couple of flights of stairs, rather than riding the elevator. Or they should drive the car part way to work, park it a mile or two away and walk the rest of the way. Or both.

Jogging has become increasingly popular in recent years among males and females of all ages. This is good in its place and under proper medical supervision. Anyone who is contemplating the start of a jogging program should check first with his physician.

Exercise in the open air is as a rule more pleasant and, therefore probably more beneficial than when done indoors. This is true particularly with reference to middle-aged and older men.

Proper education and training, along with physical exercise as part of teen-age lives, would not make it necessary to begin in middle age. It should already have been established

To youth I say: First, don't put on any weight after the age of 22; second, keep physically active all through life; third, don't smoke cigarettes.

The heart and circulatory system is ingenious and highly complicated. It evolved under conditions associated with rigorous physical activity and has not adjusted to the sedentary existence pursued by so many people today. This lack of adjustment expresses itself in diseased arteries, high blood pressure and other disorders which all too often set the stage for heart attacks and strokes.

Let us discuss the two major disorders responsible.

One of them is atherosclerosis, a disease in which fibrous tissue from thrombosis, cholesterol fat, and blood cells become embedded on and in the inner walls of the artery, interfering with the circulation of the blood itself. These fibrous and fatty deposits accumulate, grow in size, and calcify over many years, gradually narrowing and roughening the channel through which the

No guarantee can be offered that rigid adherenece to proper diets will prevent heart attacks. But this we do know—the mortality rate is much higher among those with a high cholesterol content and is far lower among those with a low or moderate reading.

You didn't mention the cut of the diamond as being an important factor in determining the cost, along with the clarity, weight and color. And please, Ann, get the price right. have high blood pressure. There is one mort important risk factor, cigarette smoking.

The heart and circulatory system evolved under conditions of rigorous physical activity, not at all like the sedentary lives so many people lead today. Much the same is true with respect to cigarettes. Human evolution did not contemplate that the lungs and body chemistry would be subjected to a continuing assault by cigarette smoke.

The severity of coronary artery involvement (atherosclerosis, or "hardening of the arteries") increases in relation to both the number of packs of cigarettes smoked daily and the number of years the habit has been practiced.

It has also been disclosed that elevated levels of blood cholesterol, long implicated as a major risk factor in heart attacks, may also be associated with increased risk of lung cancer in cigarette smokers.

This is known: If cigarette *mokers had the same relatively favorable mortality experience as non-smokers, there would be about 80,000 fewer deaths each year from heart attacks, to say nothing of another 45,000 from lung cancer. My advice to non-smokers is this: Never take your first puff. My suggestion to those who now smoke cigarettes is to drop the habit immediately. You'll feel better, breathe better, cough less, look better and live longer.

Dry Town Has Drinking Problem

SALEM, Ore. (AP) - State Rep. Joe Rogers told the Oregon legislature that a city which bans liquor needs its share of the revenue from the state liquor monopoly sales. He' said Monmouth, dry since 1870. would normally get $700 a year from state liquor profits on a per capita basis and needs it to deal with problems of drinking.

Rogers said that despite the official dryness, sanitation men report they haul away more empty liquor bottles from Monmouth, population 4,600 than from any other town in the

Undramatic Programs

The emphasis will be on often undramatic programs, such as housing projects and negotiating for better jobs, rather than headline-getting marches and protest demonstrations.

A pilot project in the organizing stage at Philadelphia, Pa., will concentrate on improving schools for Negroes.

"This is the real hard nitty gritty," said the Rev. Joseph E. Lowery of Atlanta, chairman of the 53-member board of directors. "We recognize the fact that a larger percentage of our work may not be glamorous, dramatic, attention-getting." Lowery and other SCLC sources confirmed that the organization, dependent upon contributions, has been in a low peperiod financially but expects to remain solvent. Some staff members, including many hired for the Poor People's Campaign last year in Washington, have been discharged.

Trim Staff Others probably will be released. The staff numbers about 100, trimmed from upwards of 150 during the Poor People's Campaign.

"There will be changes in staff structure and staff responsibility," Lowery said. These changes will be worked out over the next three months. Publishing Changes Create A NewPaper Mill

Lighter Magazines Helping Escanaba

Escanaba Rotarians got an inside view of the Upper Peninsula's greatest paper mill project from a man identified with it from inception at their meeting Tuesday in the House

George S. Douglas told them of the Mead Corp. decision to expand its Escanaba Paper Co. division and the reasons for it, tion of the huge mill now underway at Groos on the Escanaba River. It will start operations this fall. Douglas was manager of Escanaba Paper Co. through the decision making and early consstruction period and is now identified with the project for Mead.

ASSEMBLY OF THE huge new paper machine made in Beloit, Wis., for Escanaba Paper Co.'s new mill at Groos is proceeding, George S. Douglas told Escanaba Rotarians Tuesday at the House of Ludington. Here the machine is pictured with drier rolls being installed. The steel cylinders come from the manufacturer with an anti-rust coating which must be removed before use. The building housing the machine is 1,240 feet long, 105 feet wide and 85 feet high. It creates 260,000 square feet of manufacturing space. The machine will produce a sheet of paper 25 feet wide at a speed of 30 miles an hour, with control by a computer. (Daily Press Photo by

DETROIT - They come and they go - with the exception of Gordie Howe. This is a collection from some of the best from the legend of Gordie Howe:

No. 9 of the Red Wings is meeting No. 9 of the Red Wings. This is just after conclusion of a practice session in Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto. The Red Wings tramp single file through the passageway into their dressing room, making a racket as their skate blades clack on the floor planks.

Behind them tramp another team, the other Red Wings, a kids' team which honors the famous nickname in a Toronto bantam league. The boys, dressed in their mini Red Wings' jerseys, enter nervous and excited.

No 9 of the little Red Wings is bashful. His brown eyes flow self-consciously from his Oriental features. Somebody yells, "Hey Gordie, look at No. 9."

Some of the others laugh. Quickly, the man in the bigger No. 9 grabs the little Chinese boy's right hand.

"That's okay, I'm Polish, too" says No. 9, slicing through the embarrassment. The boy breaks out into a grin.

This is Gordie Howe, the man. The hamlet of Floral, Saskatchewan, outside Saskatoon, is bleak place in 1938. One afternoon a teacher-hockey coach is talking to a 10-year-old pupil at the King George School. "You'd better play goal because your skating isn't strong mough," is the advice.

The boy practices on the natural ice rinks around his home. He skates hours every day. One year later he is adept enough on skates to play defense. His team wins 16-0 and another teacher has another bit of sage advice for the youngster.

"You shouldn't rub it in like that. Don't ever do that again in school sports. It isn't sporting to make the other team look so bad."

Eleven-year-old Gordon Howe has scored 15 of his team's

It is April 15, 1953, after the Red Wing have completed the Stanley Cup playoffs. Gordon Howe and Colleen Joffa are married in Calvary Presbyterian Church, Detroit.

The Rev. O. Frank Storch speaks the benediction and Gordie and Colleen are man and wife. The organ pipes up with the Wedding March and Gordie begins to lead his wife down the

"Hey," says Howe, using one of his frequent hockey game

He stops a couple of steps down the aisle and kisses the "I always thought I was a pretty calm guy," says Howe.

"But I got a little shaky up there. Kept listening for those cues from the minister and remembered everything but the kiss."

There is always somebody abusive in Boston. This guy sits front row rinkside near the bench. He is a big mouth and his noise is directed at Howe. He doesn't know much about hockey, but he sure can yell.

One night he gets too noisy.

The guy's mouth opens and Howe lets the action skate away for an instent. Gordie reaches over the glass and lets big mouth have it with two jabs of his stick. He skates away while big mouth jumps up and starts yelling. But big mouth has to shut up so he can wipe the blood off his face.

He gets everything he deserves.

The Michigan Association of Nurserymen's annual convention is in session. The topic for the address is "An athlete and His Garden." The speaker - Gordon Howe. "The only time I ever really have a green thumb is when I hit it with a hammer," says Gordie. One afternoon he wants to help out and cleans the flower

"I did a good job weeding them," he says, "pulling out just about everything. Then Colleen came home from shopping and told me she had planted several hundred annuals the day before and I had just taken them all out."
